LARRISON'S MEN LEARN PRIMARY INFANTRY WORK

Primary instructions in "right face," "left face" and all the other movements and steps of beginners' infantry drill were delivered to the new Coast Artillery Company of the National Guard yesterday evening from 5 to 6 o'clock by Sgt. Bruce W. Shelton, sergeant-instructor with the 1st infantry, N. G. H., on detail from the regular army.

Sgt. Shelton worked with Capt.
George A. Larrison in drilling the men, and both officers expressed satisfaction with the manner in which the "green ones" picked up the new commands.

Orders were given at the close of the period for the men to meet next Thursday afternoon at Fort De Russy, the hour being set at 5 o'clock sharp.

The men will leave the car line at the De Russy station and walk to the fort, where regular army officers will take them in charge. The first lesson is to consist of a visit to the gun emplacements, where all the general apparatus will be pointed out to the company members.
